

The Psychological Society of Ireland privacy statement

The Psychological Society of Ireland (PSI) fully respects your right to privacy, and will not collect any personal information about you on this website without your clear permission. Any personal information which you volunteer to PSI will be treated with the highest standards of security and confidentiality, strictly in accordance with the Data Protection Acts, 1988 & 2003.

PSI monitors the use of its web site and collects aggregate information in this process. As you browse through our Web site, our Web server collects information about your visit. No personally identifiable data is collected. We gather and monitor statistics such as: the number of visitors to our site, time and dates and the pages viewed. It is intended that this information will be used to improve our Web site.

The PSI does not collect any personal data about you on this website, apart from information which you volunteer (for example, by email, feedback forms or update profile forms). The PSI Web site contains links to other companies Web sites. PSI is not responsible for the privacy practices or the content of such Web sites.

If you have any queries or comments about our privacy statement, please contact the webmaster.